

To allow telephone companies to exclude competing Internet service providers (ISPs) from offering DSL broadband to consumers is really not in the best interests of the consumer and would NOT give the consumer choices. This is totally, not freedom of choice. Allowing the telephone monopolies to influence even what content is made available on their networks is by far the most ridiculous. If your job is to protect the consumer, this is certainly not how to do it.

It would be nice if someone did their job by protecting the consumer and not the big corporations that contribute to the campaigns of the very people that are protecting them.
